Tiimo Mang and Tim MacAllister

Tiimo Mang
Many of my ideas are born out of a core, lifelong challenge of resisting fear. Accepting fear rather than resisting it has created a deeply personal process of letting go, allowing me to be more compassionate and understanding of myself and those around me. The insights and freedom gained through this journey are reflected in much of my work. Yet, it is this very process that consistently challenges and confronts me, requiring a return to self-reflection. Ultimately ... a truly authentic, deeper and more meaningful work of art is born.

“Forgotten from Where We are Begotten” explores much of our current culture’s turning away from its ancestral roots. This has produced an advertising and sales machine that has created a materialistic society consuming at all costs, leaving ever more widening gaps between ourselves, other nations and cultures, and humanity’s home, Mother Earth. The two figurative stainless steel Sandhill cranes represent this absentmindedness and laser focus on the future and the next shiny thing. The petroglyphic crane is a scale replica of a crane carved into the sandstone on Comb Ridge in Bluff, Utah by the Anasazi People millennia ago.

From the Moab Police Department Facebook page on February 11, 2021:
Three of the public art installations on Center Street between Main Street and 100 East were vandalized by unknown suspect(s). We’re developing a timeline now and officers are canvassing the area for video surveillance. We believe the damage was done at some point within the last few days. If you have any information about these crimes please contact us at 435-259-8938.

CITY OFFERS REWARD
IN ART VANDALISM INCIDENTS

Three art installations on Center Street were damaged by vandals late Wednesday evening, Feb. 10, or early Thursday morning, Feb. 11, Moab City Manager Joel Linares said Thursday morning. Another art installation in the same area was discovered damaged on Friday, Feb. 5 and appeared to have been struck by a vehicle. At this time is it unknown if the two separate incidents are connected.

“The City of Moab is offering a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those involved in the incidents,” Linares said.

Inspired by rock art of ancient cultures and forged from remnants of modern development, the “Oracular Oracle” directs viewers toward earth, sky, past, and present.

Moab ArTTrails, the local public arts organization behind the annually rotating exhibit of sculpture in Grand County’s cultural district, is pleased to announce that Oracular Oracle, by local artist, MIK, Tim McCallister, will be 2020’s permanent addition to the public collection.

The selectors were unanimous for the 12 ft metal work, assembled with remnants of modern development ,desert ephemera, and inspired by rock art of ancient cultures. The “Oracular Oracle” directs viewers toward earth, sky, past, present and future . The piece has been standing at Moab’s Center and Main, in front of Pasta Jays, and will remain at that location until the next installation event, planned forward to October, 2021.

Michael Dunton said that this year more local artists are on exhibit than ever before. “With our long-term goal of locally cultivating a creative economy, it did feel great to know that we were able to purchase from a local artist.”

The People’s Choice votes were tallied: the Winner of the $1000.00 cash award goes to Colorado artist Tiimo Mang for his angular flight of birds old and new, ‘Forgotten from Where We Are Begotten.’

Until COVID hit, an estimated million people saw the public artworks annually. The numbers are a big draw for participating artists from around the country who appreciate the ample public presence as much as the program’s commitment to annual purchase.

Moab ArTTrails, a non-profit under the aegis of the Moab Arts Council, had big plans until 2020 changed them. The difficult but necessary Oracle photo by Bruce Hucko decision to postpone the call to artists until June 2021 comes with the hope that by fall of next year, sufficient recovery of health and economic indicators will allow for exhibition events.

The third year of this program was produced with the kind support of the Moab Arts Council, the Moab Arts & Recreation Center, Grand County, the City of Moab, and an ever wider circle of artists, contributors, arts lovers, civil servants, and community builders.

Moab ArTTrails encourages anyone interested in participating as a future selection committee member or who would like to cultivate public art to be in touch via moabartrails.org, and on FaceBook.
